RECENT WORK

2024 has been a busy year for Ryan. He's currently a recurring guest star on Amazon's new series, "Countdown," where he portrays Rolf Morozov, a Belarusian-speaking criminal. Taking on his own stunts, he joins a talented cast led by Jensen Ackles. Ryan also wrapped roles in two Westerns, "Stolen Reins" and "Killing Faith," alongside stars Guy Pearce and Bill Pullman. In addition, he appeared as Hank Martin in two episodes of "Griselda" with Sofia Vergara and shot an episode of the Fox Hawaii drama "Rescue Hi Surf." Rounding out the year, he filmed a supporting role in the upcoming horror feature "The Stage," starring Matthew Lawrence.

STAGE WORK

On the stage, Ryan has had the good fortune of appearing in lead roles that challenged him immensely and pushed him into stepping up his abilities as a performer. Similar to his work in front of the camera, his roles in the theatre have all been wildly different.

FOOL FOR LOVE

THE DOGS POND

His theatre work began in the 2014 production of True West. Ryan played the troubled writer Austin in the play. In 2018, he appeared in John Steinbeck's Of Mice and Men, playing the role of George. He followed up that performance with The Dogs Pond, written by Travis G. Baker. He took on the role of Carter, a hipster craft beer entrepreneur. In 2019, he portrayed Eddie in Sam Shepard's Fool For Love. For that role Ryan learned how to rope and lasso.
